What is a blog?

A blog is short for Web-log.

It's the internet equivalent of a diary or journal, and once it's put online, it is viewable by anyone, anywhere in the world. And it can never truly be deleted. Ever.

Hate blogs, like Atlas, are totally anonymous. Technology allows the people behind it to conceal their identities. But their words reveal who they are and who they support.

For over two years, Nocera's friends and allies (many believe Nocera helps run the site) on the Atlas blog have attacked and mocked not just local Republican Party leaders and elected officials -- but their wives and children. And they praise Nocera! Coincidence?

These cowards use the internet to make crude, rude, vile and insulting remarks that would get them shunned anywhere in polite society.

Some people really will make a deal with the devil. Controversial Glenn Nocera, whose Democrat-leaning Young Republican Club was officially de-certified by the New York State Republican Party, has decided to run himself and his sister for both seats on Brooklyn's Republican County Committee.

Don't be fooled: if the Noceras are elected on Tuesday, they will use the position to continue their hateful campaign against our party.

Nocera stood by while Brooklyn's Young Republican Club was turned into a sad cult of personality, and used to attack solid, decent Republican Party leaders.

His Worst Offense

Far more offensive is the political alliance Nocera made with a group of internet hate activists, Atlas Shrugs in Brooklyn. Many believe that he and his closest friends run that website themselves.

Glenn Nocera

Friend & Supporter of the Atlas Shrugs website.
Or one of its creators?

This cowardly group posts the most hateful, despicable items on their website – attacking the wives and children of Republican leaders.
